Reply:

1. The Food and Environmental Hygiene Department (FEHD) has been actively taking forward the Enhanced Public Toilet Refurbishment Programme (Enhanced PTRP) with the Architectural Services Department (ArchSD) since 2019-20. As at 31 December 2025, full refurbishment or facelifting projects for about 480 public toilets had been rolled out as scheduled, and the works for over 200 of which had been completed. The estimated expenditures for and details of respective projects are set out in Annex I. FEHD and ArchSD are planning to commence the refurbishment or facelifting projects for 105 public toilets in 2026-27. The estimated expenditures and details of respective projects are set out in Annex II.
2. FEHD introduced a new approach of procuring the public toilet cleansing service separately through dedicated contracts on a pilot basis in 2022. This means that the public toilet cleansing service is taken out from the street cleansing service contracts and procured separately under a dedicated contract. Currently, the new approach has been adopted in the contracts of 12 districts. The list of public toilets for which the cleansing service is procured separately under a dedicated contract is set out in Annex III.
3. FEHD has all along been identifying and introducing the technologies and equipment that can improve public toilet service through various channels, including drawing reference from local, Mainland and overseas experience. It has been comprehensively enhancing the facilities, management and hygiene of public toilets under its management through a multi-pronged approach, including applying new technologies, improving management standard, actively taking forward the Enhanced PTRP and stepping up publicity and education.

FEHD introduced the “ozone nanobubble technology” in early 2025 for application in the flushing system to oxidise the bacteria and viruses in water and reduce odours. The flushing system is being tested in 4 public toilets, and there are plans to extend the testing to another 4 public toilets with high utilisation rates this year. In addition, FEHD has installed an advanced air purification system that employs the “nano plasma driven catalysis air purification technology” or “nano confined catalytic oxidation technology” in over 130 public toilets with high utilisation rates across the territory since 2019, which effectively decomposes odour-causing substances. It plans to install the above air purification system in 10 other public toilets this year.

FEHD has, in collaboration with the Electrical and Mechanical Services Department (EMSD), installed a smart system in 15 public toilets, including those equipped with odour sensors to monitor in real time the odour level in the air. When the odour consistently exceeds a certain level for over 15 minutes, the system will automatically issue a mobile phone short message, informing officers to arrange cleaning immediately. The system also features a user feedback system to collect users’ views, which enhances management efficiency through data analysis. FEHD and EMSD plan to install the system in about 50 other public toilets for further testing. FEHD has also been working with EMSD on the testing and installation of fall detection sensors in 2 accessible toilets. If the system detects a user falling down or remaining motionless for too long, the alarm will be triggered to facilitate timely assistance. The system will be installed in accessible toilets of about 40 public toilets this year.

The Adenosine Triphosphate (ATP) luminometer was introduced in 2025 to rapidly detect organic contaminants on environmental surfaces and objectively assess the cleanliness of public toilets through scientific data. If any frequently touched areas are found to be non-compliant, staff members will be immediately instructed to enhance cleaning efforts.

For locations with no public sewerage or water and electricity supply, FEHD has introduced solar-powered eco-smart toilets, which use solar energy to supply electricity and can be self-sustained with power and water, and utilise electro-catalytic oxidation to process waste water on the scene. The first eco-friendly toilet has been in service at Lok Ma Chau (San Tin) Public Transport Interchange since February 2025.

FEHD has fully implemented the Minor Works Order Record System mobile app, which enables frontline staff to submit repair requests immediately and track progress in real time. This significantly expedites the repair process and enables systematic collection of management data.

Also, since 2024, the Outstanding Toilet Attendant Award Presentation Ceremony has been held annually to recognise outstanding frontline staff for their exceptional performance, encourage the enhancement of service standards, as well as promote respect for frontline staff and caring for public property among the public. For public toilets at tourist attractions or those with high utilisation rates, a new wireless broadcasting system has been installed through which promotional audio messages are played to remind the public to uphold civic-mindedness, use the facilities properly and keep the public toilets clean. From 2024 onwards, FEHD has gradually installed the system in 200 suitable public toilets.
